Anchorage School District

Carol Comeau, Superintendent, 742-4000

The Anchorage Police Department is an asset to the students, parents and employees of the Anchorage School District. Through its proactive involvement with schools, the police department fosters positive relationships among students, school staff and law enforcement officers.

Striving to ensure the safety of students and school staff, officers have conducted crisis response training sessions at every school. This three-hour training teaches school staff how to prevent and prepare for crisis situations, and what to expect from police during a crisis. APD also reviews school crisis plans.

The department's canine unit gives numerous elementary school presentations that reinforce the anti-bullying messages being taught in schools. The officers and their dogs make a positive and lasting impact on the young students. In fact, officers and teachers at five schools formed "Bully Busters" teams with students.

Other officers have made hundreds of classroom presentations on topics such as personal safety, alcohol and substance abuse prevention, violence prevention and gang related issues, traffic laws and rights, and career opportunities in law enforcement.

The police department continually communicates with the superintendent and others about juvenile crime and safety issues in the community, which helps the district prepare for and minimize the impact these events could have at school.

Through a cooperative APD-ASD initiative, Anchorage received a Cops in Schools Grant in 2003 that enabled the city to hire 13 police officers who will be specifically assigned to juvenile crime and safety. The officers will be housed in high schools, but will work with students from all grade levels at all schools. During the summer the officers will focus on juvenile issues in the community, such as vandalism, drugs and alcohol, and curfew violations.

Beyond the various programs and avenues of communication, APD staff have shown a personal level of involvement with our schools that rises far above and beyond expectation. For that, the Anchorage School District gives heartfelt thanks and praise to the men and women of the Anchorage Police Department.

Tudor Elementary School

Lindsay Henry, Principal, 742-1050

The Anchorage Aces have been an ASD School Business Partner since 1998, but three years ago they developed a recreational reading program, "Skate-into-Reading," which promotes the importance of reading and education through the use of professional athletes as positive role models. This year, the Aces made appearances at fifteen different elementary schools. During the school visits, the players read to children, passed out free books, and talked about the importance of reading, staying in school, and teamwork. In partnership with Subway, Xpress Lube, the Imaginarium, and Fred Meyer, they were able to give the students coupons as incentives.

As the only professional sports team in Alaska, the Aces feel they have an important niche to fill in Anchorage. Using the players to promote the importance of reading to school-aged children is their top priority in community relations. The Aces have been making visits to elementary schools for several years, but the inspiration to turn those visits into an opportunity to promote reading came four years ago. Creekside Park PTA, in conjunction with a recreational reading program, contacted the Aces to do an appearance. After seeing the excitement generated by their visit, they decided to create a program that they could offer to other schools as well. This year, with the help of other corporate sponsors, the program was offered to fifteen schools!

Students look forward not only for a chance to meet their favorite hockey player, but also for the chance to earn great prizes by reading. At Creekside and Tudor, the PTAs have become involved so that additional prizes can be offered to encourage participation. Baxter Elementary School was one of the new schools that participated in the program with the help of Baxter Community School and the Baxter Reading Committee.

While many schools have their own recreational reading programs, the Aces are able to contribute in a very different and special way. Their presence and assistance help to encourage the reluctant or disinterested reader. The Aces look forward to the continued success of "Skate-into-Reading!" The New Anchorage Aces deserve this recognition for their contributions to ASD and their dedication to the lifelong learning of our students.

Alyeska Pipeline Service Company
Janie Leask, Community Relations, 787-8565

partnered with

Russian Jack Elementary School
Karen Shaw, principal, 742-130

Russian Jack Elementary values their partnership with Alyeska Pipeline and its employees. Alyeska has impacted Russian Jack students' academic success, as well as offering financial support. They've also provided role models and friendship for the students.

PAIR (Partners Assisting in Reading) Program - On a daily basis, 15 Alyeska employees volunteer about one hour each to two or three struggling readers. For many students, it is their only chance to sit with an adult and read.

RCCP (Resolving Conflict Creatively Program) – RCCP teaches choosing peaceful solutions to problems. Alyeska provides the facility to train student mediators and money to pay for a Mediator Coach on the playground.

On a yearly basis, Halloween trick or treating for all Russian Jack classes is hosted at the Alyeska facility. The employees decorate the building, dress in costumes and provide treats for a safe Halloween experience.

A Thanksgiving Feast for students and staff is provided at the school on a yearly basis. For some children, this is their only turkey dinner. The "formal" atmosphere is an excellent experience for all the students.

Other donations include the following:

- $500 in books during the 2002 United Way Campaign
- P.E. equipment, math supplies, clothing for students and families, pizza parties
- Chaperones for field trips and academic tutors
- Academic incentives

When Russian Jack was severely damaged by fire in December of 1998, Alyeska was the first to step in to help. They were extremely generous and donated building space to be used as classrooms, which was essential for school to continue. They also donated furniture, office supplies, books, and many other supplies that helped get Russian Jack up and running.

Mirror Lake Middle School

Emily Blahous, Technology Facilitator, 742-3500

When Mirror Lake Middle School opened over six years ago, Tech Facilitator, Emily Blahous knew it had the capability for close circuit broadcasting. Experimentation ensued and by the second year, a student video team was established and the school news was broadcast several days a week. The impact on the school was immediate!

Team members were experiencing the “real world” of broadcasting. Members came in before school to ready the broadcast and experienced the stress of a deadline. The Video Team gained stature in the eyes of their peers.

Almost three years ago, Mirror Lake's Video Team invited Mr. Augie Hiebert and daughter Cathy Hiebert to watch the Team produce the morning video news. Augie was immediately intrigued with the sophistication of equipment, enthusiasm, and tremendous impact on the student body. He saw potential and opportunities for communication that stretched well beyond the closed circuit, daily morning video news broadcasts. His enthusiasm helped to even further support the School Business Partnership with Channel 11 – the station that Mr. Hiebert founded many years ago.

With his highly respected and well known pioneering development in the field of Alaska's communication systems, Augie's contacts are innumerable. They not only reach all over Alaska, but also extend across the United States. He has tapped these contacts and resources to share with Mirror Lake! He regularly brings distinguished visitors to watch the broadcasts.

With Mr. Hiebert's help, Mirror Lake now has its own fledgling radio station – KIOT! He introduced station managers and professors from the University of Alaska Anchorage's Communication and Journalism School. Weekly broadcasts can be heard over UAA's KRUA station on Sundays. The partnership with UAA has been very valuable and Mirror Lake is now applying to the FCC for a low frequency FM station, which will allow broadcasts to parents and community!

Augie Hiebert is our mentor, our teacher, but most of all, our friend!

Fort Richardson

Brian Griggs, YESS Director, 384-7500

partnered with

Bartlett High School

Chuck Fannin, Principal, 742-1820

Three programs have come to fruition through this School Business Partnership:

- Adolescent Substance Abuse Counseling Services (ASACS)
- Youth Education Support Services (YESS)
- Planning Academic Career Excellence (PACE) program – a two week transition and orientation program for students new to Bartlett High School and the ASD. It consists of six sessions that can be completed in a two week time frame. Sessions include a school tour, an introduction to the Bartlett High School Community, dealing with change and stress, an introduction to Anchorage and the state of Alaska.

Brian Griggs, YESS Director, attends Bartlett's parent advisory meetings as well as many athletic events and school activities at Bartlett. Brian is a co-instructor with Leesa Wingo and Diana Lloyd, Bartlett staff members. Neither the after school programs nor the PACE programs is limited to military children and is open programs for all Bartlett students.

These programs have served over 200 students at Bartlett during the 2002-2003 school year. Fort Richardson works with Bartlett administration to address concerns and needs of the school in all areas that are impacted by Bartlett's close proximity to the base.

Fort Richardson's Buckner Physical Fitness Center is Bartlett's emergency relocation site. Army recruiters have been present with the Army Hum Vee at a variety of Bartlett events. It is this kind of presence at Bartlett that makes this School Business Partnership an outstanding success and worthy of recognition.

Tam Agosti-Gisler

Central Middle School teacher

Johanna Naylor, Acting Principal, 742-5100

“Tam’s eyes gleam with excitement when she teaches students in her French classes and when she leads her School Business Partnership Class students through the countless hours of service opportunities. Her professional commitment to her students and the community are qualities that have led Central students into successful leadership roles.

Her students meet her high expectations because of her ‘can do’ attitude and because of her faith in them as individuals and as a team. She is a treasure and her students know it. The community knows it. Our Central Staff knows it. When Tam speaks, we all listen. Her greatest talent is that she motivates her students through her passion for community service and responsibility. Tam sets the bar quite high for students and demands excellence. She then gives them the knowledge, the skills, the experience, and the motivation to reach that bar. Teachers such as Tam are priceless and hard to find. The staff, parents, students, and community members respect her. She motivates us all.”

Johanna Naylor, Acting Principal, Central Middle School of Science

Tam is the coordinator for Central’s School Business Partnerships which include: Anchorage Convention & Visitors Bureau (ACVB), YESS/Fort Richardson, Mary Conrad Center, Key Bank, Alaska Joint Electrical Apprenticeship and Training Trust (AJEATT), Aurora Vending, Blockbuster Video, Kid’s Kitchen, Alaska Youth as Resources.

Examples of Central’s Semi-Annual or Annual Projects

- Pennies for the Penniless to benefit Kid’s Kitchen ($17,047.00 raised since 1997)
- ACVB Wild About Anchorage Trivia Contest to increase awareness of Anchorage and surrounding areas among 7th graders district-wide.
- Mock Job Interviews and Job Shadow Days with business partners and other companies to teach students interview and resume skills and expose students to various careers
- Key Bank Neighbors Make the Difference Day trash collection
- ACVB City of Lights tree decorating
- Play backdrops, Christmas caroling, Valentines, & Easter eggs for Mary Conrad Center

Student Award

Mears Middle School Media Literacy Team by Carrie Sumner, teacher

Georgia Taton, principal, Mears Middle School 563-4228

Mears SBPC Media Literacy Team Members:

Nicholas Heise, Tori Hite, Kara McNeal, Megan Morton, and Jessica Richards

This nomination is not for individual students, but a team of students who have taken on a daunting task. These students have taken it upon themselves to educate their fellow students about the manipulation of our culture by the media.

In the fall of 2002, the five team members attended the Safe and Drug Free Schools' Media Literacy training. The students attended a full, two-day training. After attending the training, they were upset, moved and inspired by what they had learned.

They were challenged to come up with a school plan. They planned an all out attack on media literacy that was three-fold: 1) Inform the staff about the importance of Media Literacy Education; 2) Create an inspiring 45-minute lesson plan for students and finally; and 3) Teach the Media Literacy Training themselves as a team.

With the plan in hand, they went to Principal Georgia Taton to propose their ideas. She was more than receptive and put them on the calendar for the following day's staff meeting. The students presented the information and let teachers know they were ready to be booked for classes.

"The team taught over a dozen classes to seventh and eighth graders. The staff raved about the classes and the student participants often stated that they had learned a great deal from the trainers. Students are shown a short film to explain the harm that can come from the impact of media, like ads for alcohol and tobacco. They help kids see the truth about why you would not want to buy the product. It's an empowering tool for kids. The Media Literacy Team has gone above and beyond the call of duty in their quest to help fellow students make good choices. They are willing to stand up and say, 'Alcohol and tobacco are not cool. The only reason some people think that is because the media tricks us into thinking that.' The impact that these students have had on the school population and the community is immeasurable."

Carrie Sumner, Mears SBPC teacher
