Letter from the Editor

Our class began working with mini-society a little over a month ago. We finally have our money system in place, officers elected and the students are receiving mini-society money for work they do in the classroom.

I hope the note I sent home regarding my expectations for mini-society was clear in stating what this project is about and what I expect from the students.

We should be having one more sale day after this week. The purpose of having sale days is not just for the fun of it, but mainly to teach students that everything in life costs something and to teach them a lesson in free enterprise.

Thank you for your support of this project.

Mrs. Kajikawa

I'd like to extend my gratitude to all the parents who provided cupcakes for the cupcake walk. We had so many cupcakes, we sold some in the lunchroom. Our booth did very well thanks to your help.

No assigned homework next week. Students who do not get an A or B on spelling tests will have homework next week. Upcoming tests will be listed in this section.

**Friday- English chapter test- last English test for the year!

Thursday- weekly spelling test

Curriculum Corner:

Reading: The students are reading Charlie Skedaddle and we are about half way through the book.

Writing Process/English: We should be finishing the chapter on adverbs this week. The English chapter test is scheduled for next Friday. The last publication of the year for writing is due next week Thursday.

Math: Chapter 10 in math covers subtraction of fractions. The regrouping section will be more difficult but we have been studying this for the past month so the students should not have much trouble with it.

Social Studies: The Civil War years is the focus of this chapter in social studies.

Science: We are working with the glucose test and test for fat in foods this week in our Food Chemistry Unit. We also started researching information about seals and other sea animals in preparation for our field trip to the Sealife Center.

Health: We will cover the blood and AIDS newsletter in health next week.

Summer is just 13 days away!!
