Finding the creator and strong consequences for the plagiarizer.

Copyright violation (using images, music, or other materials that you didn't create)

It's plagiarism if you:

- Borrow work from any part of an online source including but not limited to Turnitin.com
- Use images, graphics, diagrams, charts, tables, graphs, or other visual materials
- Use or reword another’s published or unpublished work, or your own

WHAT I TEACH On Turnitin.com to help identify plagiarism: you upload your rough or final draft to Turnitin.com and will receive a similarity report that you think you're just borrowing, but it's much bigger than that.

- Make sure your teacher uses Turnitin.com
- Submit your rough draft in time to correct plagiarism
- Take time to do your best without rushing and assessing your paper too closely on the text
- Cite sources properly
- Take careful notes and be a deliberate researcher

WHAT I TEACH In your own words: plagiarism is “leading readers to think that you’re trying to pass off the work of another writer (your) as your own” (Turabian 2013, 78-79).
