Hello art friends! I hope that you are all doing well and are adjusting to the new situation in which we find ourselves. I know things have been weird and maybe a little scary, but it won't be any time at all until we are all having fun learning a little more about art and maybe some history of art. I look forward to this chance to do things a bit differently and I will be trying really hard to find cool, interesting things for you to explore!

This week I have a neat project for you to try. When you scroll down this letter, you will find a different letter, number or shape that you can make into a picture if you follow the steps. These are by grade level, but if you figure yours out you might want to try a harder one. I tried these and had fun drawing them, so I hope that you do too!

If you are done and want to try other neat projects, keep scrolling to the bottom of the page!

Keep going! There is one more cool idea!

*Get your mom or dad to help you with this one. Make a stained-glass window (that washes away very easily!). Thanks to Bryanna Lemieux from Facebook for the awesome idea.

My daughter had so much fun! We had to do a few coats to get it dark enough. We mixed kids crayola washable paint with a bit of water and a drop of dawn soap. We did test a corner it wiped of easily with a wet cloth.

Update/edit: ok so wow did not expect this kind of reaction to my post we were just joining in the fun like everyone else in this group. I used to do stain glass windows in school we used markers then though the idea of painting it came from this group the members and admins get that credit!! thank you to them for these neat ideas and a great distractions for the kids.

Please i am not excepting friend requests and I'm not sure why this upsets some ppl to be reporting it this was all just done in good fun.
