Frederick McKinley Jones left his mark with the development of refrigeration equipment, receiving over 40 patents for it. In the 1930s, he began inventing automatic refrigerated air-cooling units for trucks, trains, ships, and planes, which helped the preservation of food. His creation, the Thermo King, allowed people to eat fresh food year-round. His work also contributed to the preservation of blood and medicine, proving to be particularly useful during WWII. In 1991, he became the first African American to receive the National Medal of Technology.

Good morning, Bartlett Bears! Today is Elizabeth Peratrovich Day. Who was Elizabeth Peratrovich? She was a Tlingit Alaskan civil rights activist, and the Grand President of the Alaska Native Sisterhood. She advocated for the passage of Alaska's Anti-Discrimination Act of 1945, which was the United States first anti-discrimination law. She worked and fought for Alaska Natives to be treated as equals instead of second-class citizens. Happy Elizabeth Peratrovich Day!"
